The Grand Army at St Louis.

The Grand Army of the Republic-tha splendid organization, composed entirely of men who battled for the preservation of the Union-has just closed one of its most successful and the largest of its annual re-

It is one of the greatest evidences of the strength of our institutions to see thousands of the men, representing their own number increased by at least twenty fold, who a few short years ago were soldiers of the republic fighting one of the greatest wars of the world, now assemble as peace ful citizens.

Truly these men have "turned the sword into the plowshare," for they, who in seried phalanxes "fronted grim visaged war." now represent as citizens all the paeffic arts which make the country they saved as soldiers rich, great, and prosperous. The meeting at St. Louis was harmonious and pleasant, and the old soldiers return to their peaceful pursuits with new zest tories and renewal of old ties. The business of the meeting was con ducted without a jar or a discord. The officers selected for the ensuing year are all gentlemen of ability and distinction, and the call upon the nation to remember the men who, to its most of perth risked life and fortune and health for its preservation, gained by remembrances of former vic-

was timely and proper. The people of the United States do not intend to neglect or overlook the claims of the brave men who are suffering because they defended the life of the nation. It is rich, powerful, and secure because of their bravery and their suffering, and it will not permit any of its brave defenders to want. The Grand Army reunion was a grand success. It could not be anything else, composed, as it was, of the grandest soldiers who ever fought for a righteous

The "Valley Virginian" on Virginia Politics.

The Valley Virginian, in an exhaustive and well-considered article, reviews what the NATIONAL REPUBLICAN has said in regard to the condition of the Republican party in Virginia. The criticisms of the lirginian upon the position taken by the NATIONAL REPUBLICAN do not exceed the proper limits of fair discussion, and the whole article is one well intended to promote Republican success in the state.

The Virginian thinks that in its article of the 22d of September the NATIONAL RE PUBLICAN made some mistakes because i declared that success must be considered every Republican was to aid in winning victory—that the time to settle party grievances was at the coming state convention, and that it was political suicide for any of the leaders of the party to aid to enure to the benefit of ex-Senator Mahone. The Valley Virginian closes by saying of the National Republican :

We are always gratified to have its able as sistance in fighting the battles of Republican-ism against Democracy in Virginia, but it ought to be sure that it is right before it goes ahead. Despotic bossism in Virginia has to go, whether it be in one party or the other, as the people are fully aroused as to this. The in terests of the Republican party of Virginia as well as the "Republican party of the nation" demand this. And this demand is emphasized by a reference to the past of which the REFUR-LICAN cught not to be Ignorant. The Republi-cans of Virginia are not all slaves, nor are they all posing for office and salary. There are grave interests to consult and consider in this state sport from any national affairs, and in these the people are directly concerned. They do not want to see their hopes wrecked in this respect in a wild scramble on the part of the "leaders" for office and power—to be used to persecute and humilate those who dare to think that "leaders," like other people_are fallible, and that it is to them more than to the people disasters are properly chargeable.

When it comes to an issue between any one mair or combination of "leaders" and the Republican party, we are for the Republican party. It will live when the "leaders" are tainly preserve our self-respect. The Valley Virginian cannot possibly go further in opposition to "bossism" than the National Republican goes. In fact, the intelligent men of the country—the class from which the Republican party draws most of its members-is itself a protest against "bossism."

forgetten or only remembered for the mischlef they may have done. And in maintaining this position we not only serve the best inter-ests of the Republicans of Virginia, but the "Republican party of the nation," and cer

But there are worse things than "boss ism." Bourbon rule in Virginia is one of these. Admit that ex-Senator Mahone attempts to play the role of "boss" in Virginia politics, cannot the Republicans of that state remember that he is for this can vase, by their act, chairman of the execu tive committee, which is the organized power of the party?

That is what the NATIONAL REPUBLICAN protests against. And its position cannot be mistaken as to Senator Mahone. It recognizes to him a Republican of ability and standing, but owes him no more fealty than it does every other Republican. It claims that the contest in Virginia is between the principles of the Republican party and those, if they have any, of th Bourbon Democracy. In that it is glad to see the Valley Virginian agrees with it. So far as the offices are concerned it is all well enough to talk of disinterested mo tives. But there is a good deal of human nature in men, and the prizes of politics life are strong incentives in the goverof men's actions. So we presented that argument as one calculated to have its effect. Party organizations cannot exist unless discipline is maintained, and that the rear. We repeat what we have said before The contest in Virginia is one involving higher considerations than whether Gen Mahone shall occupy a seat in the United States Senate, to which he has a perfect right to aspire and work for. It is Republianism against Bourbonism.

cannot be done unless bolters are sent to Every Republican in the state will agree to this, as the Valley Virginian does. Then let all work together to win the victory for Republicanism The NATIONAL REPUBLI-CAN will aid them all in its power. And success is certain if harmony prevails.

THE Lynchburg (Va.) News says the Democrats of Virginia must get down to work-"rail splitting" instead of sky scraping-if they expect to win, and the ark joins in a most doleful wall ove the prospect of defeat.

OUR NATIONAL GUARD. The Apacostia Rifles to Be Mustered

In To-Night. The members of the old 8th battalion, D trict of Columbia Volunteers of 1861, discussed last night the proposition of forming a batta ion for the District National Guard, the object being to perpetuate the name of the pare

HARRIS'S BIJOU THRATER.

'Mardo' received a large audience at the Bijou last evening, and the audience received great pleasure from its representation. It is historical, romantic, and animal, as a dog, a historical, romantic, and animal, as a dog, a historical, romantic, and ion appear in it. The story—partly American, parity Rueslander, and any opportunities for particula sentiments, which are boldly and even defaulty uttered by our western wanderer, Mardo, the Hunter. The car admires, wonders, and trembles. There is much dagger, pistol, and gun work, dynamite explodes, and a hone burns. Many people are killed, but enough surrive, happily, to finish the drama. The acting throughout was excellent; especially to be commended was that of Mardo, Frank I. Frayne, ir.; Countess Therese, Misplorence Worth, and Carlotta, Miss Blanche Reed, "Mardo' will be repeated to-day and to-night, and also at the matinge and on the evening of to-morrow. "It is of No Use."

It is useless for the aggressive merchant to rely upon the seductiveness of the "blind-man's-buff" advertisement of by-gone days to increase his business. What every man of trade wants is to reach the people; and what the people want of an advertisement is precisely the same they seek in a directory or a dictionary-in-

The simple information we would embody in this advertisement is that we are holding our fall opening of new millinery and cloaks. Both departments are on the second floor, and in both departments will be found novelties that will charm and interest you. In millinery we are showing patterns of the various styles in hats and bonnets that will be most popular the coming season; and we have stocked our cloak room with all the latest productions. That is all there is to be said about the opening, except to mention that we are offering at the glove counter some ladies' kid street glovesblack, brown, or tan, with heavy embroidery and wrist welts to match-at 68 cents per pair that are actually worth $1.25. Cheap as they are we can sell but two pairs to one individual.

Now you know we are holding an opening, and we will be pleased to have you call. We issued no cards.
